Preface

This is the fourth published edition of the Outline of Classification. Earlier editions were issued in 1955, 1961 and 1970, and a brief description of the classification scheme then being introduced appeared in the prefatory pages of Canadian Government Publications: Consolidated Annual Catalogue, 1953. A draft for the present edition, prepared in 1977-78 by a former staff member, has been in limited circulation in photocopied typescript, but the published edition differs greatly from this draft and has been updated to comprehend the situation as of late 1983.

The third edition, a loose-leaf service never updated, has been out of print for many years. To judge from the number and nature of the requests for a new edition, Canadian libraries, particularly those which shelve all or part of their depository collections by Supply and Services catalogue number, have a real need of a new edition of this outline shelflist. This edition has been prepared with the needs of these libraries in mind, although in the full knowledge that all of those needs cannot be met. The greatest need has seemed to be for information and explanations, and these we have tried to supply. One particular point should be mentioned: earlier editions have outlined English-language publications in the English version and French-language publications in the French version. In this edition, both English and French versions cover all the catalogued materials.

The Outline is presented in greater detail than one would wish. The limitations of the basic scheme (for example, the lack of fixed positions for the forms of publication and the narrow base) have resulted in a highly irregular development of the classes. The need to cope with rapid organizational changes in government structure has led from an early period to the transfer of agencies from one class to another, the superimposition of one class on another and the failure to separate agencies from parent bodies to which they have ceased to belong. Some practices in applying numbers are difficult to comprehend as one looks back over the record, but they appear to stem as much from the lack of a written method for developing the scheme as from the vicissitudes of thirty years. Furthermore, there are classes where there has been no room left for development, and catalogue numbers have had to be supplied at positions which are not logical. For some time past, it has been the practice, as an interim measure, to make as few changes in class numbers as possible: this has been done partly in order to avoid complicating the classification still farther and partly because it was found that changes of catalogue number were not always being reflected in the inventory records at the Publishing Centre.

All these circumstances have produced a classification which has been difficult to present and impossible to present briefly. For this reason we have included a resumé and a summary of current classes for quick reference. It is hoped that these aids, together with the explanation of symbols and the index of names, will answer many immediate questions.

It has been found best to give historical notes only where definite information exists in the records of the Documentation Section. Defunct as well as existing agencies are presented in the complete Outline if these agencies have produced publications to which catalogue numbers have been assigned; but information as to the births and deaths of agencies and serials has been given only where it can be given with confidence. There are a great many references in the text, intended to allow users to trace changes in the scheme. It should be noted, however, that these are changes in the positions of catalogue numbers, not necessarily changes in the corporate structure of the agencies whose publications are classed. The word 'formerly', so often found in the text, refers to the former use of a number, not necessarily to the former condition of an agency. Nonetheless, this warning once given, it is reasonable to say that changes in catalogue number do usually follow changes in corporate structure, and that there is considerable historical information to be found here.

One other warning is necessary. The present publication is emphatically not intended as a tool for descriptive cataloguing. Names of agencies are given as they are used in the catalogues of government publications, not in AACR2 form. For corporate name authorities, users are referred to Canadiana Authorities, produced by the National Library.

Those familiar with the 1970 edition will notice certain differences in presentation between that edition and this one. Most of these are minor, but some should be explained. The catalogue numbers within each class have been arranged in straight numerical order, ignoring the earlier convention that the scheme possessed a decimal base and that such a number as 42 should be treated as a logical extension of the number 4. A greater attempt than in former editions has been made to group the numbers by agency, sub-agency and form of publication. Individual series, often assigned whole numbers originally, have been brought out as in earlier editions, but only if they are important or continue to appear. On the whole, specific titles appear only where there is likely to be difficulty in identifying or locating them. Finally, the old form class "Miscellaneous" has been renamed "Monographs, etc." The "etc." is an acknowledgement that these classes contain some materials which are not monographs. All of these new conventions are intended to help locate and group publications for purposes of re-organization. The organization or re-organization of collections appears to be one of most frequent reasons for which depositories request information about the catalogue numbers used at the Publishing Centre.

Introduction

Background information

One of the chief recognized uses of an official classification scheme for government documents is to permit shelving of publications by catalogue number in separate documents collections and subsequent access to the collections through government publications catalogues which contain these numbers. Judging by the enquiries and comments received by the Publishing Centre in the past few years, it is doubtful if a great many libraries use the present scheme for this purpose,[1] but more libraries would be likely to consider it if more, and more current, information were available on the system. There are, in addition, libraries with documents collections partly shelved by these catalogue numbers. But library shelving is not the only purpose for which the catalogue numbers exist. In the first instance, a catalogue number provides a brief identification of a document for purposes of procurement from source, handling, distribution and record-keeping as well as for acquisition by the public.

ISBN has frequently been suggested for distribution and acquisition, and the Publishing Centre has been actively extending the coverage of ISBN for Government of Canada publications during the past few years. However, it is not only conservatism that prevents the Publishing Centre from adopting ISBN as the sole or principal identifying number for its publications. The catalogue numbers provide a concise statement of information essential in procurement and order fulfillment: the catalogue number identifies the issuing agency and, because it is a classification and not an arbitrary accession number, groups a given publication with its previous editions and parts and with its second language version. Furthermore, the well-known predominance of serials among government publications means that ISSN would be needed as well as ISBN, and the application of ISSN to government serials is neither complete nor within the Publishing Centre's control. It seems likely that ISBN and ISSN could be used as the sole identifying numbers if a whole complex of equivalent titles and equivalent ISBNs were built into the system of inventory, but the present on-line inventory system does not allow for this.

Returning to the needs of libraries, we have considered the suggestion occasionally made that the Publishing Centre should adopt one or another of the widely-used library classification schemes. Such suggestions seem usually to come from librarians in search of cataloguing copy and wishing to integrate their documents with the main library collection. In fact, the Publishing Centre has neither the mandate nor the resources to provide cataloguing copy: these matters are in the province of the National Library. The Publishing Centre's system, like that of other government documents schemes provided by other governments, applies to documents collections only. In this connection, one particularly important circumstance should be mentioned. Unlike the brief descriptions of documents contained in the Weekly Checklist and its by-products, the catalogue numbers are not prepared with the publications in hand. Any subject classification can only be assigned from the book or a substantial part of the manuscript; but, in fact, our catalogue numbers must be assigned with great rapidity before publication and usually from very inadequate information. This circumstance, together with the fact that publications undergo many transformations before they reach the light of day, is responsible for many supposed errors in applying catalogue numbers and is the governing factor in limiting what can be done to improve the classification system.

[1] A survey of the educational and public library depositories carried out in 1977 by the Publishing Centre showed that only 17% of these libraries used the scheme in organizing their collections. Jarvi reported in 1976 that 45% of academic and public libraries in Canada were making use of the system for the shelf arrangement of separate documents collections, but the population surveyed was not the same and the questions asked would differ. (Jarvi, Edith. Access to Canadian Government Publications in Canadian Academic and Public Libraries. Ottawa: Canadian Library Association, 1977. P.17.)

The earlier editions of the Outline presented a rationalized outline shelflist of government publications classified according to the Supply and Services Canada system. The 1970 edition resembled a much expanded version of the "Summary" included in this edition, a schedule of the classes in use or to be used in the immediate future. This was relatively clear and useful for the identification and shelving of current documents. But the documents situation has become increasingly complex in the past fourteen years, and the records indicate that long before 1970 there were difficulties. Unfortunately, to rationalize a classification for future use, and to transfer documents in the Publishing Centre's shelflist accordingly, will not change the catalogue numbers already assigned, used and printed on the publications. A number once printed cannot be changed, and so it is necessary to account for past publications before beginning something new. For this reason the Outline which follows is not what many people would hope: it is not a clear, simple system for coping with government documents. It is a record of what is known about the existing classes of publications in as far as this information is contained in the Documentation Section's files. It is an essential preliminary to the establishment of more systematic catalogue numbers, because it shows the materials to be organized and the results of the mistakes and successes of thirty years. It is needed both by libraries who must identify their documents (especially series) in order to reorganize them and by the Publishing Centre, where documents are requested by the catalogue numbers printed on them and recorded in bibliographies and data bases, not by catalogue numbers revised in shelflists long after the publication of the documents themselves. Yet there is simply no more room in some classes, the base of the scheme must be regularized to allow consistent application, and we must take account of our useful friend, the computer.

Proposals

In the course of the work on this Outline, we have learned a great deal about those features of this scheme which have proved workable and those which have not. Since one of the chief sources of difficulty with these catalogue numbers has undoubtedly been the lack of written communication on the subject, we are presenting here proposals for future development. It will take several months to implement these. They are not radical, but the changes will affect the Publishing Centre's inventory and distribution, libraries using the numbers for any purpose and, to a lesser extent, author departments whose publications officers have become accustomed to their assigned ranges of numbers. If librarians wish to comment before our final decisions are made, they are asked to bear in mind the information given in the foregoing paragraphs as well as the following points. The source of a publication and its form are of paramount importance for distributors; notation which identifies parts or issues of a publication is much more necessary to distributors than to libraries; systematic arrangement for access to the content of the publications, past publications as well as current ones, is of great importance to libraries; both distributors and libraries are concerned to keep the issues of any given serial together and to identify relationships between editions.

A. Scope. The scheme should allow for the integration of older continuing serials on library shelves. Other publications (non-serials and dead serials) issued before the cut-off date for the old notation should be shelved immediately ahead of current publications produced by the same agency.

B. Basic arrangement. The two traditional categories of publications, parliamentary and departmental, remain, of course. But certain publications should be pulled from these categories and placed in a new group following the parliamentary documents for classification purposes: statutes, consolidated regulations, gazettes, collected regulatory agendas. These publications are often used together and should be placed together; furthermore, more than one agency contributes to their production.

Departmental publications should continue to be classed by issuing body. However, stringent hierarchical classification is not workable: hierarchies change rapidly.

A great deal of confusion and change can be eliminated by classing as independent units agencies which fulfill a distinct function and have a history of frequent change from department to department. For example, the venerable Canadian Forestry Service should remain a distinct class. Within agencies classed at departmental level, another source of confusion should be eliminated by ignoring the existence of communications units (information units, public affairs units) as authors. Those publications actually prepared as to content in such communications units should be classed as publications of the department as a whole. Sub-classes for sub-agencies should be established in simple accession order as these sub-agencies begin publishing, without attempting to group the divisions within the branch or directorate of which they form parts. The unit responsible for the content of the publications should be given a sub-class number, without regard for its current administrative affiliations. For example, the Mental Health Division requires its own number, whether it is a division, section or branch, and its number should be retained in spite of name changes and reporting levels, even if the number is nowhere near that for other divisions of the same branch.

New agencies and sub-agencies which are clearly successors to existing bodies should be classed with their predecessors and the relationship noted; but real reorganization requires the establishment of new classes or sub-classes.

No class or catalogue number once used should ever be re-used.

*C. Notation. A broader base and regular form divisions are needed.

The notation for the basic publications of the Senate and House of Commons should be retained, but a class following these should be established to contain the general materials named in the first paragraph under "Basic arrangement" above. The catalogue numbers for Statistics Canada publications should continue to reflect the numbers applied by Statistics Canada itself even though the structure of these differs from the structure described below.

Each department or first-level agency should be identified by two letters, both written in capitals regardless of whether they represent the first two letters of a word or the initial letters of two words. The class letters now used should be retained as far as possible, single letters being extended to become double letters, as EX for E and AG for A. The value of keeping class letters which are familiar to order processing personnel and already on record far exceeds the possible value of establishing a mnemonic system of letters. The present class letters have been complained of as being mnemonic in English only; this was never wholly true, but in any event, changes in names over time and across languages make it futile to aim at mnemonic systems based on corporate names. New letter combinations should be drawn from the bilingual word in the name of the agency if there is one; otherwise, they should be established by the original classifier in his own language, provided that he avoids conflict with letter-combinations already existing and also avoids the use of I and O as second letters. In ten years, the class letters will be arbitrary in any case; but they will be familiar.

To the class letters should be added numbers with a base of 100 in order to establish a broad base and to allow old monographs and discontinued serials to maintain their old positions without conflict. Continuing serials can be reshelved with their new issues at the new numbers where libraries wish to do this.

The following table of subdivisions is suggested for use with each agency and sub-agency at character position 5:

|---|---|
| 1 | Administrative informationInformation on matters wholly administered by a subordinate body classes with the subordinate body. |
| 2 | Annuals and directoriesInclude biennials and repeatedly updated single reference books. |

|---|---|
| 3 | PeriodicalsA publication issued as an annual or base volume and updated by a periodical should be treated as a periodical unless it falls in subdivision 1 above. |
| 4 | SeriesSubdivisions 5 and 6 take precedence over 4. |
| 5 | Reports of inquiries |
| 6 | Conference proceedings |
| 7 | (left open) |
| 8 | Monographs (1)Books or substantial booklets. |
| 9 | Monographs (2)Pamphlet material. |

A specific table for subdivision 1 is needed. Using the development symbols employed in this Outline, where -a is the year, -1+ is accession order and -c is the report or issue number as printed on the publication, a suggested outline of subdivision 1 follows as it would be used for the publications of a department generally.

|---|---|
| XX101-1/a | Annual report |
| XX101-2-1+/a | Annual or biennial reviews |
| XX101-3-1+/a | Reports on laws administered |
| XX101-4-1+/a | Office consolidations |
| XX101-5/c | Regulatory agenda |
| XX101-6/c | Cabinet discussion papers |

The other subdivisions, as applied to the department generally, then follow:

|---|---|
| XX102-1+/a | Annuals and directories |
| XX102-1/a | (Reserve for the catalogue of publications.) |
| XX103-1+/v-c | Periodicals |
| XX104-1+/c | Series |
| XX105-1+/a | Reports of inquiries |
| XX106-1+/a | Conference proceedings |
| XX107-1+ | (open) |
| XX108-1+/a | Monographs (1) |
| XX109-1+/a | Monographs (2) |

The subordinate units of the department are indicated at character position 4. That is, under each department, XX100 is the department as a whole, XX110, 120, etc. are the units within the department, continuing indefinitely, even using 210, 220, etc. if necessary. (For Environment Canada, where 100 has already been used, the department as a whole would begin with the notation 200.) The table of subdivisions may be used with each subordinate unit; for example, XX238-1+/a would be used for the separate books of a sub-agency assigned the class number XX230.

A publication in fiche or other non-print form may belong to any of the above classes. Use the appropriate class and indicate the medium of publication at the end of the catalogue number.

A publication which changes physical form or periodicity without changing its identity (content and title) should remain at its assigned number until there is a real bibliographic change. If a loose-leaf service becomes a fiche service, simply add M to the catalogue number.

The number up to the slash identifies the particular title; the characters after the slash identify the issue or edition of this title. The symbols used to indicate development of numbers in this Outline (see the section of this book called "Symbols") are those currently in use and should be retained.

Because the failure to develop numbers consistently has been a source of difficulties over the past thirty years, a few guidelines are needed for applying the notation to identify particular issues and volumes. Two of these are given here.

Serials.—As in contemporary practice, wherever there is a report number or issue number printed on the publication, that number should be the one from which identification of a specific issue is derived when possible. This development should be followed by the language indication, where needed, and then the indication of non-print form, if applicable. For example, XX103-26/1-4-EM might be the catalogue number for a periodical issue, where XX103-26 indicates the particular periodical title and the issue is vol. 1, no. 4. This is the English unilingual edition, microform edition. It is probable that in future a dash will precede the language indication for serials in order to assist in computer sorting of long runs.

Single works.—The development following the basic number for a particular single work is normally simply the year of publication and then the language statement, as XX108-12/1984E. If a single work appears in parts, the number identifying the part should follow the slash and precede any date that indicates the year of publication. For example, in the case of a monograph, where the date is the date of publication, the basic number for a title might be XX108-15; its first and second volumes might be numbered XX108-15/1-1985 and XX108-15/2-1986.

Libraries which may wish to use the Publishing Centre's class numbers without relying on the Publishing Centre's accession numbers should use the class number only up to the accession number position (1+); for example, XX102 or XX101-4. They may then subfile either alphabetically by title or by an accession number of their own. In the latter case, it would be advisable to precede local accession numbers by an X to avoid conflict with offically assigned numbers. For example, XX108-X1+/a.

D. Implementation. The scheme should be implemented following a cut-off date, perhaps January 1, 1986. Previously-assigned catalogue numbers should remain valid for the Publishing Centre's purposes. Reprints should keep their old numbers, but new editions and new issues of serials should be given new numbers.

E. Communication. Notification of the status of these proposals should be given on the back page of the Special List of Government Publications when and as there is something to report. If a special section on this page is provided for this purpose, lists of class numbers could be printed there as they are established.

| ps | Parliament and session |
| Example: | |
| XC12 | House of Commons. Standing Committee on Agriculture |
| XC12-ps | The Committee in a given parliament and session |
| XC12-321 | The Committee in the 32nd parliament, 1st session |

|---|---|
| v | Volume |
| Example: | |
| SP2-2 | Canada gazette, part II |
| SP2-2/v-c | By volume and issue number |
| SP2-2/117-5 | Vol. 117, No. 5 |

|---|---|
| E | English text only |
| F | French text only |
| | No language symbol — English and French are under one cover. Before January, 1980, the lack of a language symbol indicated that the text was either bilingual or English only. |
| S | Inuktitut text only (Statistics Canada use S to indicate a supplement.) |
| Br | Braille |
| M | Microform |

Dates. Until some time in 1973, the year in a catalogue number was not given in complete form and was not separated from the basic number by any punctuation. For example: in T52-4070, the 70 stands for 1970. This number would now be written T52-40/1970. It has been found helpful to file these old numbers as if they were written in the current form.

SUMMARY

This is a summary of classes in use as of late 1983. Where the development of a class in the complete Outline has become confused by superimposition, the principal sub-classes and form classes actually in use are given below.

Communications

In 1980, responsibility for the various cultural agencies was transferred to the Department of Communications from Secretary of State. Class numbers for the major cultural agencies have not been changed. For example, the National Library remains at SN, the Public Archives at SA. The Arts and Culture Branch, however, formerly a branch of the Secretary of State Department itself (S), has become Co50.

Statistics Canada

CS1 to 9 Non-catalogued publications

Publications which do not appear in the annual Statistics Canada Catalogue are referred to unofficially as non-catalogued publications. A listing of these publications is available in Listing of Supplementary Documents (CS11-207), issued annually from 1980 by the Library of Statistics Canada. From late 1980 to late 1982, those non-catalogued publications which were released to the Publishing Centre for listing in the Special List were given numbers for shelving purposes in CS1 to 9 according to the table below, but these numbers were not printed in the publications. They were given in the descriptions contained in the Special List and in the Quarterly Catalogue. The reference numbers of the Statistics Canada Library, used in the Listing of Supplementary Documents, were printed in many of the non-catalogued publications, and these reference numbers were noted in the Publishing Centre's listings.

In the last quarter of 1982, Statistics Canada introduced a new system of numbering for their non-catalogued publications, one which places each subject group in a position following the parallel group of catalogued publications in CS10+. These numbers are printed in most of the non-catalogued publications and have been adopted in the Publishing Centre's lists. CS1 to 9 are now used only for items not bearing printed numbers.

CS

CS10+ Catalogued publications

The numbers printed on the publications and in Statistics Canada Catalogue are used with the prefix CS. In the Publishing Centre's listings, the date is added to the Statistics Canada catalogue number for annuals and biennials, for new editions of occasionals and for the category of publication called annual-various.

The publications are arranged by Statistics Canada in subject classes. To the notation for each class, Statistics Canada adds, as needed, the following subdivisions.

|---|---|
| 001+ | Periodicals |
| 201+ | Annuals |
| 401+ | Biennials |
| 501+ | Occasionals |
| 601+ | Annual-various |

The first class is outlined below to serve as an example; for a complete listing, not only of classes, but also of publications available, see the Statistics Canada Catalogue.

Canadian Forestry Service (Environment Canada)

Formerly Forestry Branch, Department of Resources and Development (1950-1953); then Forestry Branch, Northern Affairs and National Resources (1954-1960); then Department of Forestry (1960-1966); then Forestry Branch, Department of Forestry and Rural Development (1966-1969); then Canadian Forestry Service, Department of Fisheries and Forestry (1969-1971). Part of Environment Canada since 1971.

The structure of the class was apparently established in the early 1960's, after this unit became a department and the R40's and R50's were transferred from R (Northern Affairs and National Resources) to parallel positions in Fo. In order to render the class at all comprehensible it has been necessary to retain as headings some branch names which are no longer current. The sub-classes headed with these names have not necessarily been closed off.

Currently, publications are issued bearing only the general logo of the Service or the name of a specific research centre, and most come from Research and Technical Services Directorate or the Regional Research Centres and National Forestry Institutes.

Fisheries and Oceans Canada

Before 1969 this class was used for publications of the Department of Fisheries. From 1969 to 1971, it was used for the publications of the Fisheries units of Fisheries and Forestry. Between 1971 and 1979, the class was used for the publications of the Fisheries units, including Fisheries and Marine Service, of Environment Canada (basic class En).

Units of the present Ocean Science and Surveys (formerly Ocean and Aquatic Sciences), which were classed in En between 1971 and 1979, were transferred in 1979 to positions in Fs.

Labour Canada

The original structure of this class seems to have been:

1 Annual report
2 Annuals and series
3 to 4 Monographs, etc., divided by subject
5+ Specific units of the department.

This unworkable scheme, allowing cross-classification by form, subject and author, was complicated further by the change from a one-digit base to a two-digit base, where 3+ became 30+ and 4+ became 40+. Publications are now classed principally according to form.

|---|---|
| L1-a | Annual review |
| 1-1/a | Annual report highlights |
| 2-1+/a or c | Annuals or series |
| 2-1+/a | Strikes and lockouts in Canada |
| 2-2/a | Directory of labour organizations in Canada |
| 2-5/a-1+ | Wage rates, salaries and hours of labour |
| 2-7/a | Labour standards in Canada |
| 2-15/a | Working conditions in Canadian industry |
| 2-19/a | Wage developments: annual reviewThis catalogue number was re-used in error but remains valid. A defunct series, L2-19/c, Accident prevention series, was previously classed here. |
| 2-26/c | Occasional paper |
| 2-29/a | Industrial relations research in Canada |
| 2-30/a | Calendar of expiring collective agreements |
| 2-31/a | Collective agreements analysis: federal and provincial governments |
| 2-32/a | Directory: occupational safety and health legislation in Canada |
| 3 | Monographs, etc.See L31 to 37 |
| 11-a/c | Discussion paper (Cabinet) |
| 12-1+/v-c | Periodicals |
| 13 to 14 | Labour gazette, supplements and extracts |

33-1+/a Employment, unemployment, fair practices

34-1+/a Labour legislation

35-a/1+ Reports of inquiries

36-1+/a Pension plans, accident prevention, compensation
Area of interest identifiable currently as that of Occupational Safety and Health, and some publications from this unit have been classed here in the last few years. However, lack of adequate pre-publication information has made it unwise to continue classing here. See L31-1+/a.

37-1+/a Restricted publications (1948-1958)

38 to 39 Women's Bureau

38-1+/a Monographs, etc.

39-1 to 20 Analysis of trades

YP

Pre-Confederation documents

This class appeared in the unpublished draft of the 4th edition of this Outline, but nothing issued by the Publishing Centre appears ever to have been classed here. The Confederation Debates are classed at X1-1863 and statutes of the United Provinces are in the shelflist at YX2-1+/a. The class YP is in use in the National Library's documents collection, the broad classes being as follows.

|---|---|
| YP1 | New France |
| 2 | Upper Canada |
| 3 | Lower Canada |
| 4 | Province of Canada |

Book numbers are used for the types of publication (debates, journals, statutes).

YS

Sessional papers

Statutes

YX1-1+/a Monographs, etc.
Includes selections of statutes, separately printed tables of statutes, special editions and collections of constitutional legislation.

1-50 to 82 Office consolidations
Class not used after 1956. See YX70+.

2 Statutes
2-1+/a Province of Canada, 1841-1867

2-ps/v Statutes of Canada
Canada, 1867-

3-ps/c Separate chapters of Statutes

40+ Revised Statutes of Canada
41-v 1886 (2 vols.)
42-v 1906 (4 vols.)
43-v 1927 (5 vols.)
44-v 1952 (6 vols.)
44-1970/v 1970 (11 vols.)
50+ Separate chapters of Revised Statutes
Divided as YX40.

54-1970/c Separate chapters of R.S.C. 1970

60+ Statutory Orders and Regulations
61-v War Statutory Orders (1940-1942, 8 vols.)
62-a/v Consolidation, 1949 (5 vols.)
63-a/v Consolidation, 1955 (4 vols.)
64-a/v Consolidation 1978
This edition, Consolidated Regulations of Canada, is classed with the Canada gazette, part II, at SP2-2/1977.

70+ Office consolidations
73-c-a Acts, or Acts and Regulations, by chapter of R.S.C. 1927

74-c-a Acts, or Acts and Regulations, by chapter of R.S.C. 1952

YX75-c-a — Acts, or Acts and Regulations, by chapter of R.S.C. 1970

The notation 'c' indicates the chapter of R.S.C., 'a' indicates the year of the last amendment included. Example: YX75-E-12-1982 means R.S.C. 1970, c. E-12, including the 1982 amendments (Excise Act, as amended 1982). Acts and Regulations together are numbered in the same way as Acts alone.

75-c/c — Regulations, by chapter of R.S.C. 1970

Regulations alone. The final 'c' indicates the last P.C. number included. Example: YX75-A-8/1980-666 means Regulations up to and including P.C. 1980-666 under R.S.C. 1970, c. A-8.

79-a/c-a — Acts, or Acts and Regulations, by chapter of S.C.

Acts not contained in R.S.C., usually because of later date than R.S.C. The notation 'a/c-a' indicates: years of the session/chapter-year of last amendment included. The years of the session may be abbreviated or only the last year stated. Example: YX79-1974-76/47-1982 means R.S. 1974-75-76, c.47 as amended 1982 (Energy Administration Act, amended 1982).

Royal Commissions and Conferences

See also CP32-1+/a, Reports of inquiries.

Z1-a/1+ Royal Commissions
In the notation, 'a' is the year of appointment, '1+' indicates the particular commission appointed that year. The table following has been in use since 1975; earlier, the numbers did not distinguish as clearly between the types of document.

1-a/1+ Report
The basic number for the Commission is used for the report.

1-a/1+-11+ Preliminary reports
1-a/1+-31-1+ Proceedings or minutes
1-a/1+-41-1+ Studies
1-a/1+-42 to 49 may be used to identify second and subsequent sets of studies.

1-a/1+-51-1+ Briefs
1-a/1+-52-1+ Exhibits
1-a/1+-54-1+ Memoranda
1-a/1+-61 Tapes

2-a/1+ Federal-provincial conferences
In the notation, 'a' is the year of the conference, '1+' indicates the particular conference that year. The basic number for the conference is used for the proceedings.

The following numbers were used mainly for shelving certain groups of older documents in accession order. Very few numbers for these sub-classes were ever printed on documents. The sub-classes are no longer used.

Z3-a/1+ Reports of inquiries
4-a/1+ Conference proceedings
National and international conferences.

8-a/1+ Speeches
9-a/1+ Treaties and agreements (not appearing in the Canada Treaty Series)
